THE OLD HICKORY
1926

PUBLISHED BY
THE SENIOR CLASS
OF THE
EAST TENNESSEE STATE TEACHERS COLLEGE
JOHNSON CITY, TENNESSEE

Dedication

TO

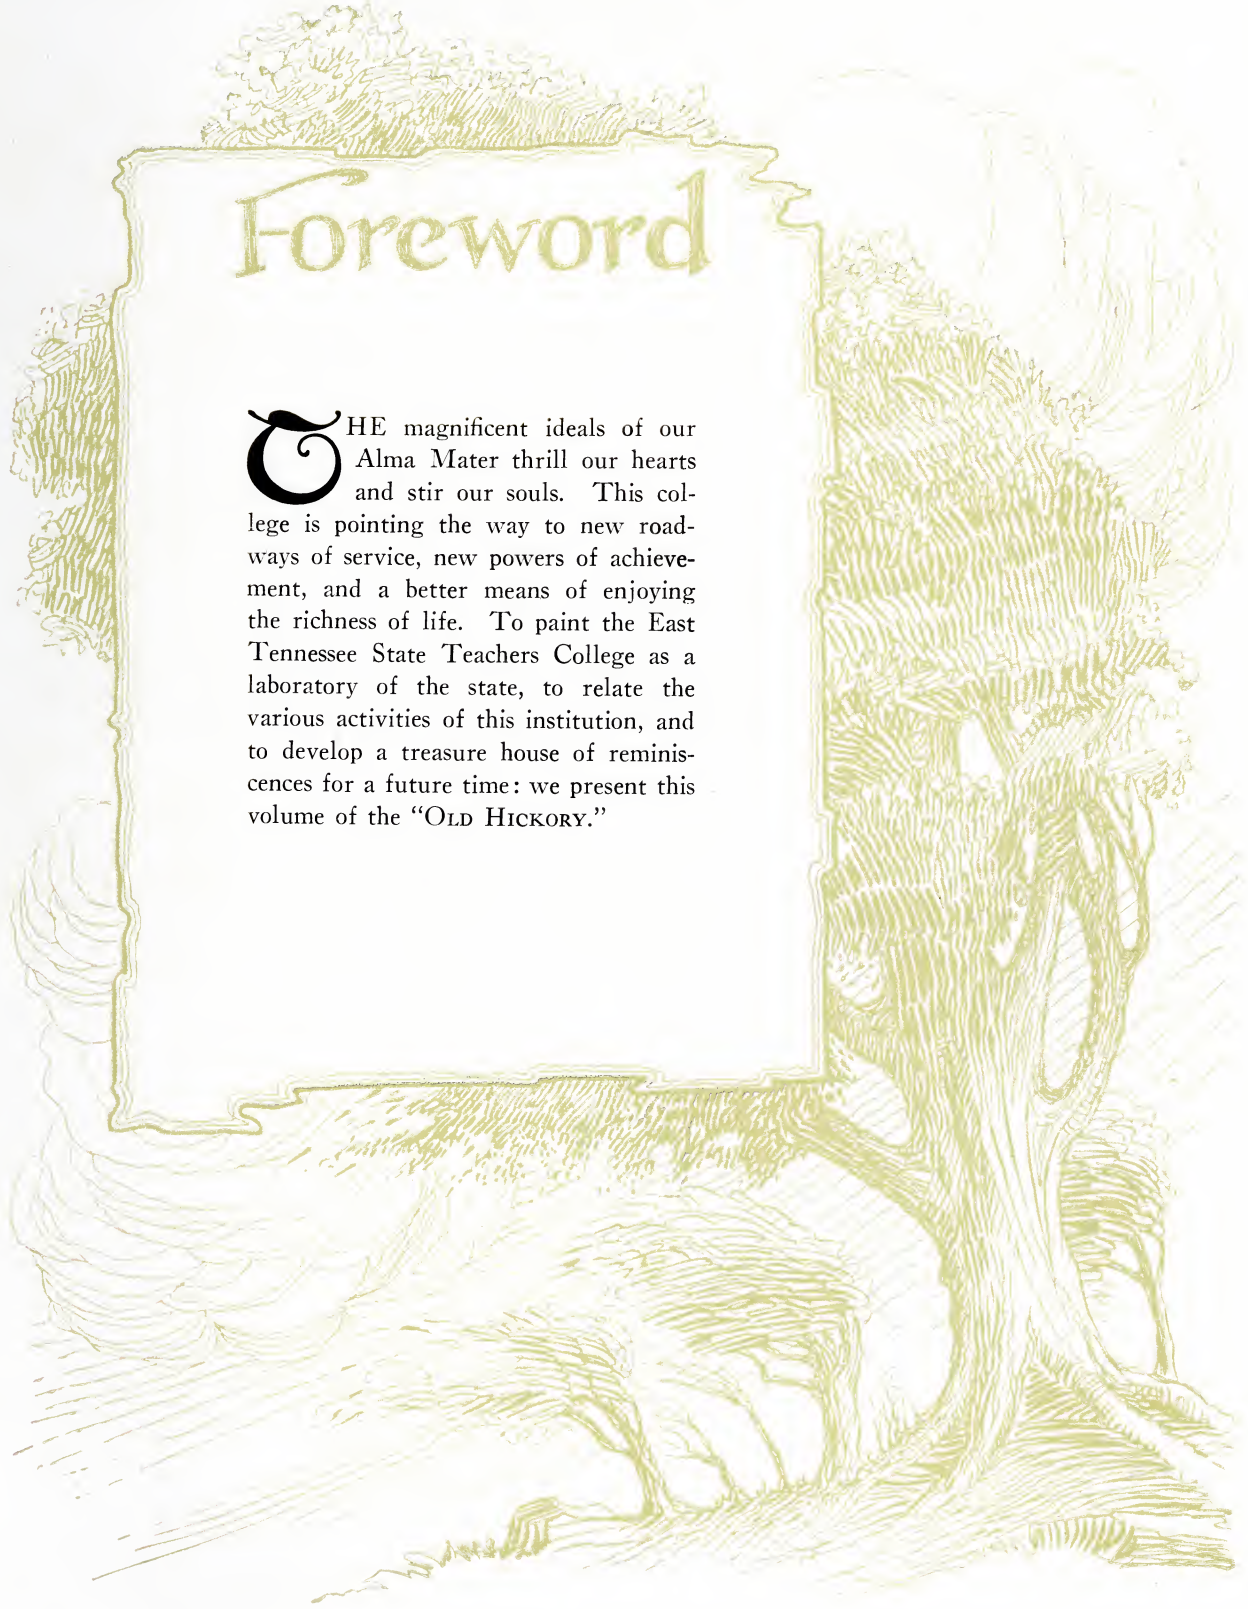

DR. CHARLES C. SHERROD

In sincere appreciation for his courtesy and support during the short year he has been here,
and to that large body—our Fathers and Mothers, who have made it possible for us to enjoy the privilege of an educational training, we affectionately dedicate this volume of

"OLD HICKORY"

Foreword

THE magnificent ideals of our Alma Mater thrill our hearts and stir our souls. This college is pointing the way to new roadways of service, new powers of achievement, and a better means of enjoying the richness of life. To paint the East Tennessee State Teachers College as a laboratory of the state, to relate the various activities of this institution, and to develop a treasure house of reminiscences for a future time: we present this volume of the "OLD HICKORY."

The Joy of Living

What has our few years in college taught us? Of course the prescribed work we have had, and the elective courses we have chosen have taught us some things worth while. But, after all are these the things that will mean most to us? No, we believe not.

Our four years here have taught us joy of just plain living. Of course we were glad to be alive before but we did not know how to live in order to get the most joy out of life—Do you know how? The answer is SERVICE.

We have labored hard; and for what end? In order that we may go forth into the world in service. We are prepared to begin a career, the greatest career of all—that of making one hundred per cent Americans of our pupils. We are beginning the huge task of making boys and girls into worth while men and women. Is there a greater service for mankind, for America, for ourselves? Is not this then the plain joy in being alive and being able to do those things?

The doctor has his mission in life, the preacher his, and the lawyer his niche to fill. These are the three professions we hear most about. Of all these, the doctor gets most joy out of living because he most nearly approaches the goal of service. The teacher has more joy in living than either because he has gone beyond the realm of these three in work for others. He has reached into the heart of childhood—that is the joy of just plain living.

A Rime of the First B.S.

M. TAYLOR MATTHEWS

*Commencement brings its painful stings
But it's true and we have to confess
Since it's easy to see, that we're happy to be
The class with the first B. S.*

*You may lift your eyes at the wild surmise
But it's history never-the-less
That they couldn't surpass our Senior Class
To bear off that first B. S.*

*From our earliest lives, with our marbles and knives,
At morning, at noon, and recess
We carried the dream—striped with cake and ice-cream
Of college—and a B. S.*

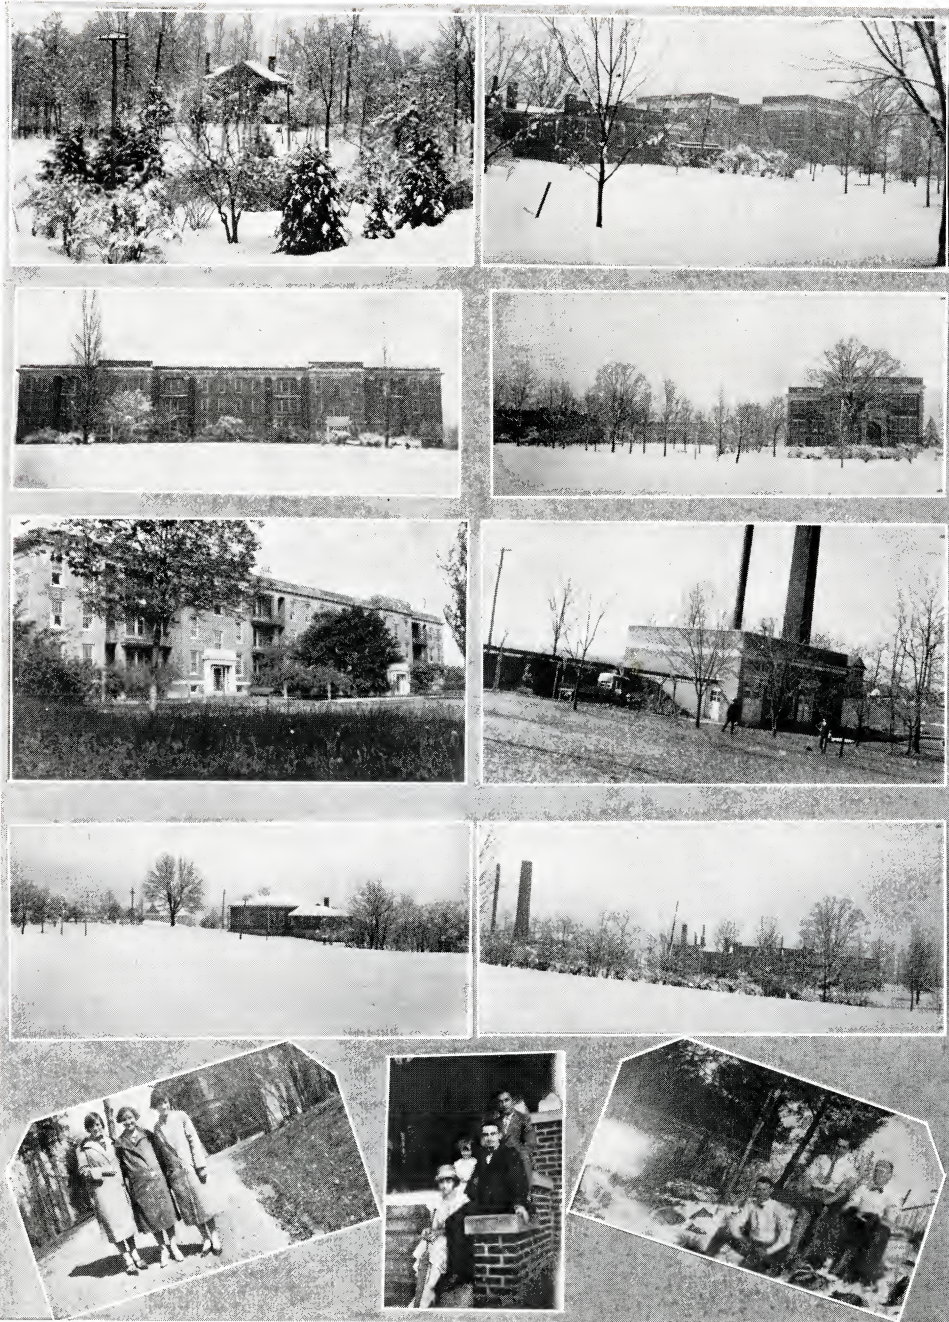

*Some came in on sleds, and in trundle-beds;
One by the Southeastern Express.
A few came in packs of old burlap sacks
Four years ago for that B. S.*

*Now those who survived and somehow contrived
By dint of industry and guess
And shuffles and shams to pass the exams
Have reached that be-ribboned B. S.*

*The whole of the town from the janitor down
Will start in to straighten the mess
Growling, "Let them go hang, the uncivilized gang!"
Now we're through and they've got their B. S.*

*And when we're worn with the years and torn
With failure and success,
They'll say, "There he goes—with a corn on his toes"—
Some bald-headed First B. S.*

To Beauty

ORIN MARSHALL

*The snow descended softly down
Upon the sleep-enamoured town
And clothed it with the whitest gowns
Of Winter's gay wardrobe;
And when the sun's first peeping ray
Announced the approach of purple day
It hailed this city, bright and gay,
The fairest on the globe.*

*But this great city never thought
To stop and see what Nature wrought:
Those melting hues could ne'er be bought
As Turner's sacred art.
The factory whistles far and near
Emitting blasts both shrill and clear,
Gave utterance to beauty's fear
That soon it must depart.*

*There lived within the city gates
A goodly host who feared the Fates
But hailed the presence of Nine Mates
That ruled their cultured throng.
Together on this god-sent morn
They came with lyre and wooded horn,
Through constant usage nobly worn,
To chant this winter song.*

*'Way out across the fields of snow
The white winged birds of winter go
To rest on dappled beds below
And purify the earth.
Each little downy, icy flake
That drifts on yonder frozen lake
Is beautiful for its own sake,
And full of happy mirth.*

*The smoke that to the ground doth fly
Should drift away into the sky
For soiling smut will soon deny
To us this perfect world.
The velvet surface, blinding white,
Will change its hue from pure daylight
Into the murky gray of night
And leave a dismal world.*

*But tarnished streams of rusty smoke,
Repulsive bits of coal and coke,
Concealed the snow and wrapped a cloak
About the city's yard.
The chilly breezes bore away
The ragged cloak of dingy gray—
Resplendence now was black decay—
Pale Beauty had no guard.*

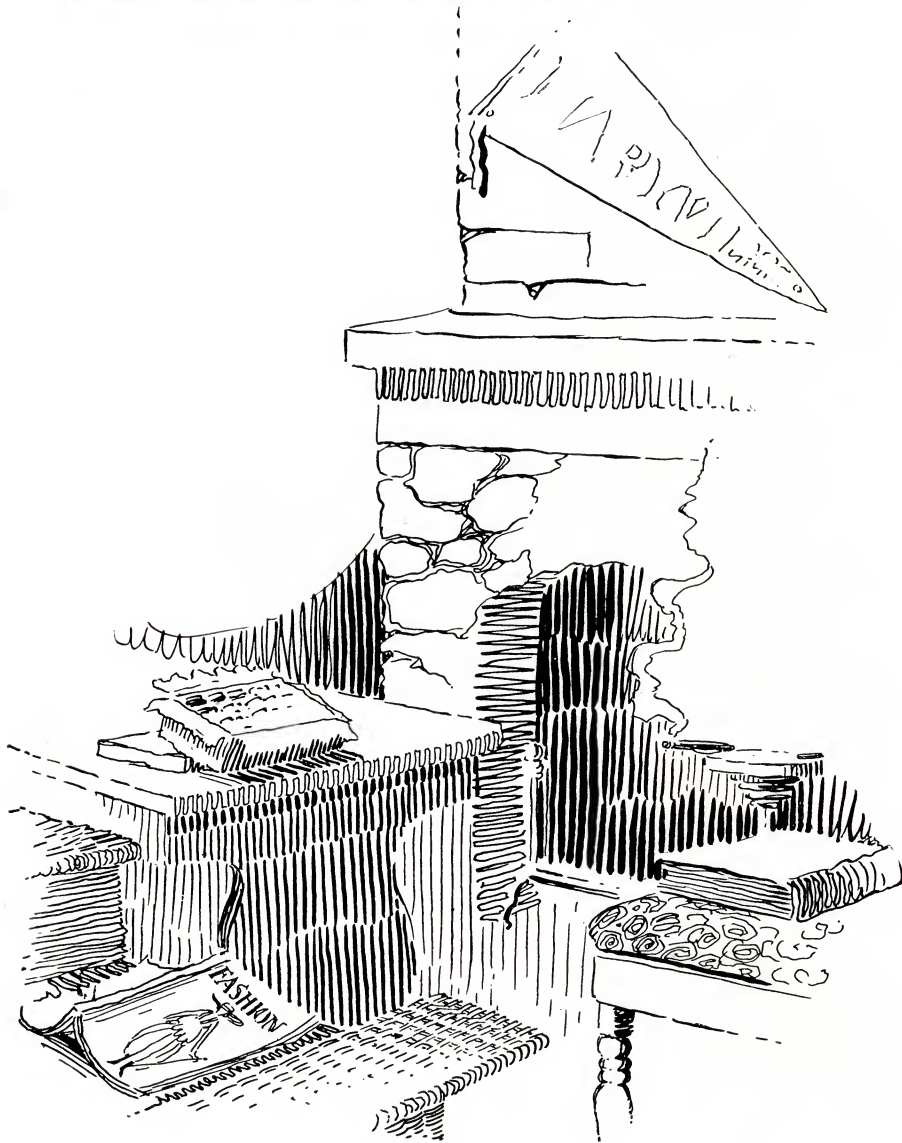

*The youthful city soon grew old,
Within its veins clear blood ran cold:
Without—a leaf of faded gold
Still fluttered in the breeze.
The dazzling morning's cheerful smile
Remained to please the throng awhile
But soon was lured by cunning guile
To melt from blackened trees.*

*Alone I stand in fields of snow:
Afar I see the flitting glow
Of my camp-fire. The brooklet's flow
Where bright-eyed daisies grew.
Ah! here I see in pure delight
The spotless coat of frosty white
Creep out to meet the dim twilight
And blend in mellow blue.*

*Along with darkness deepened gloom,
The fading of the gentian's bloom
And sealing of the evening's tomb
Forever in the past.
A thousand silent sounds of night
Resounding through the fading light
Are singing praises to the white
Of evening's purple cast.*

*The shadows swiftly come and go
Gliding softly o'er the snow
Joining bleak winds as they blow
Among the moaning trees.
A lonely herald of the sky
Greets the moon and passes by
And soars away to wander high
Among the daisied leas.*

The Architect

"Oh, to build, to build! That is the noblest of all arts." It was with great care and accurate thinking that an architect planned the Parthenon. It was with equal care and exactness that workmen followed the architect's plans in erecting the building. The hope of each was to see as a result of his labors a structure more nearly perfect than any previous one had been. These men proved themselves worthy of being builders.

The building of a human character, by virtue of its far reaching influence, is of far greater importance than was the building of the Parthenon. To each of us is given this trust; yet failing to realize the importance and responsibility of such a privilege, we have become careless architects, careless builders.

Charles Kingsley has said, "Grandeur consists in form, and not in size", and to the eye of the philosopher, the curve drawn on a paper two inches long is just as magnificent, just as symbolic of divine mysteries and melodies as when embodied in the span of some cathedral roof. With this thought in mind we remember that each detail, each element of our daily lives, tends toward a final development—character. A thing of seemingly trivial importance may form a basic element and in the foundation for character growth. As the details are, so is the whole. True enough it is that the little things count.

Just as the architect conceives the whole, then plans carefully each detail of a building, so it is necessary for us to determine our type of character, our goal, and build accordingly. When we feel that the cost of building worthy character is too great, it is well to remember that no beautiful edifice has ever been erected without cost.

It is not intended that the character of all individuals should be the same except as each one tends toward something better, something finer, something greater. Individuality helps to make our character worth while. All buildings are not alike, neither are all characters except in their general plan. It is the ornamentation of a building that makes it beautiful, so with the differentiation of character. But in choosing these distinguishing details, we must choose those that have a purpose.

Ruskin has said, "I would have, then, our ordinary dwelling-houses built to last, and built to be lovely; as rich and full of pleasantness as may be within and without: with such differences as might suit and express each man's character, and occupation, and partly his history."

So may character be built!

The Message of Spring

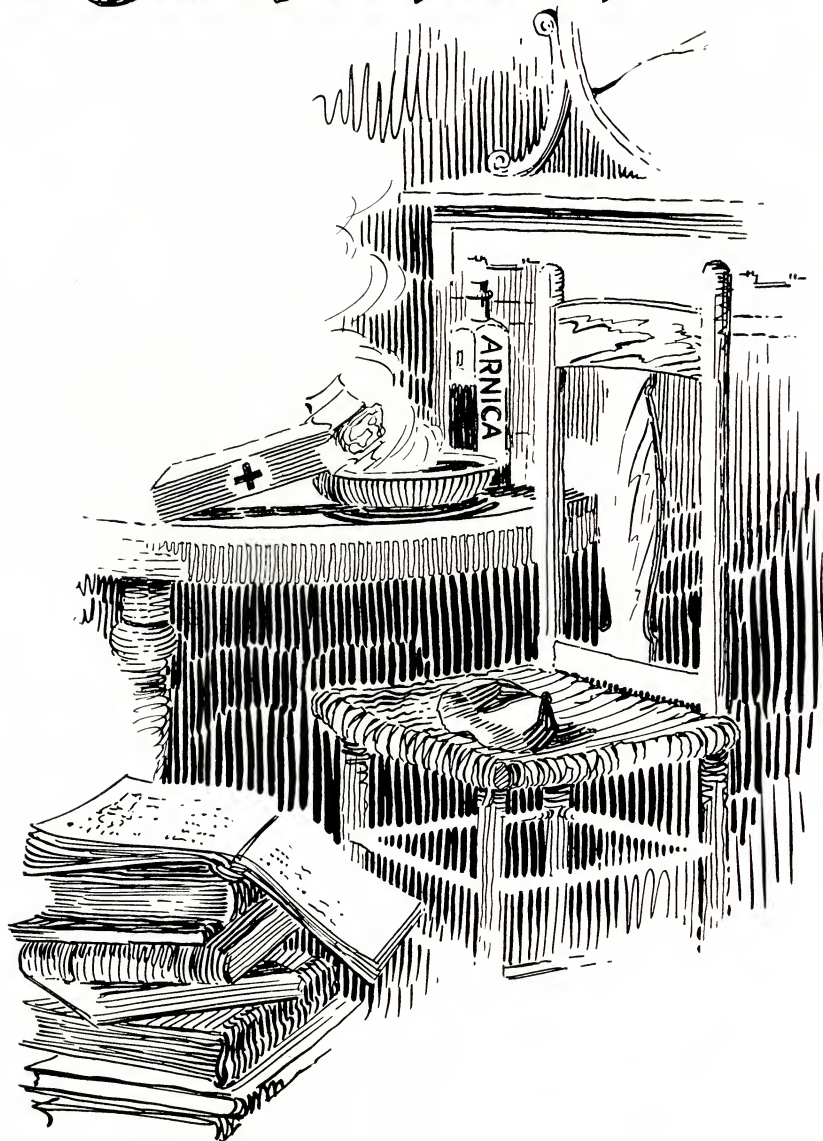

As the Spring days rapidly pass, teachers, students, and persons in other walks of life thrill with the pulsating vitality from the deep heart of Nature's mysteries—centuries old yet ever new. Spring, with her wonders of life bursting forth after the winter of rest, will never cease to gladden the heart of man and quicken within him a desire to do—to conquer—to achieve.

Especially to college students in the springtime of life does Spring bear a message of hope and promise. The world is fair with a two-fold radiance—the glory and freshness of the reviving season of greenery, and the beauty and hope of expanding life. Under Nature's spell, with the inspiration and vitality infused and strengthened within us by our college associations during the past year, the future is flushed with the assurance of success; and confidently we turn from our beloved college halls to the broader fields of active life. No matter what the future may have in store for us, no matter what cloud may arise to darken the brightness of our aspirations, the sunny skies that have arched over us at E. T. S. T. C. will remain in our memory to bless our lives. The showers and sunshine, the sorrows and joys will but bring to full maturity our awakening abilities.

And when the Autumn has come and the Harvest shall have been gathered in, may the joy felt in Life's Springtime, now subdued but deep and serene, be sustained by an abundant fruitage. Then will the promise of youth be perfected in a fine reality of honorable achievement.

Although the Fourth Year Class is small and not much has been said of it during the year, no class in school has made greater contribution to the activities according to the number enrolled than has the Fourth Year Class. In addition to several having played an active part in various Literary Societies, two members of the class, Atkinson and Brawley, were Football letter men while Miss Goodman won the Basketball "T" and was elected alternate captain for '27. Out of the total of thirteen members of the class four hail from West Virginia.

A number of these students are carrying only a unit or two of high school work being well along in the Freshman year. With the passing of this class the Preparatory Department of the college will expire. It is hoped that this class may be represented one hundred per cent strong in the Freshman Class of nineteen twenty-six and seven.

Carrying out, as usual, its motto the Pestalozzian Literary Society has been a loyal supporter of every movement of the institution during the year. The society has never boasted of quantity but is willing to match the quality of its membership against any other organization in the school.

At the beginning of the fall quarter Mrs. McFee was chosen sponsor and the success of the organization is largely due to her efforts. Near the opening of the year, the society was saddened by the death of Wootson Samuel DeMarcus, one of its most active members. The society realizes that, with the passing of Mr. DeMarcus, its strength has been weakened on earth but that the membership of the society has been strengthened in the eternal world.

During the spring quarter, the society entertained the two girls' societies with a lawn party. This party was to have been held during the winter quarter, but was postponed for more favorable weather.

The doors of the society are never locked to any man who has formerly been a member, or to men who realize the value of this type of training. The organization regrets very much to lose some of its most valuable members. Among these are Messrs. Morgan, Wallace, Archer, Berry, Garner, Matthews, and Sharp.

Early in the fall quarter the students of the Science Department met and reorganized the Science Club which they had found by past experience was very helpful in science work. Through this club we learned valuable information on the scientific discoveries and experiments not recorded in our text books. This work is very important in keeping us in touch with the many changes in the progress of the present day science and the astonishing discoveries and inventions made by men in the various fields of science. The scientific discoveries play a great part in modern civilization and industry.

Regular meetings have been held throughout the year and instructive programs have been prepared and given. Much inspiration has been given the club through the interest shown in the club by Professors Preston and Rowell.

We realize we have a large field before us, and that success was never achieved in a day. We feel that if we continue our work as started that we will gain valuable information that will be of immense benefit to ourselves and to our fellow men.

The members of the club are united in spirit and purpose: namely, gaining some knowledge of the vast possibilities of the scientific world, learning the effect of science on modern civilization, and getting a better appreciation of the services rendered mankind by the faithful scientists who have and are paving the way to industry and adding to the joy of living, many of them at the cost of their own lives.

Election of Student Body officers is always an exciting event on the college campus at the beginning of the fall quarter, and this year was no exception. Only two officers were selected on the first ballot, the president and one member of the executive council. In all the other offices a "run-over" was necessary. Lewis Cobble was selected as a member of the executive council but had to withdraw from school on account of the illness of his father. Miss Una Killian was elected to succeed him. The president of the student body and the members of the executive council meet regularly with the Student Activities Committee.

Football

The East Tennessee State Teachers College football team had one of the most successful seasons in its history this year. Notwithstanding the fact that there were only thirty-eight boys registered in the school, nineteen of which was the maximum ever out for practice, the new coach, Mr. Robinson, rounded out a good team and won from some of the leading teams of this section. At times things looked gloomy in the Teachers camp, but at no time were things so gloomy as when they lost their right tackle, Wootson DeMarcus, who died of typhoid fever a short time before the season closed. Soon, however, Biggs and Sharp appeared on the gridiron for end positions, and by the sturdy and efficient leadership of acting captain "Tete" Boswell, the team was soon in running shape again.

The first game of the season was at Bluefield, West Virginia. The Teachers played hard, and held the "Blue Devils" to a close score, but the result was a crippled squad which lost to Hiwassee one week later, the easiest team on the schedule 6-0.

Soon the Teachers were rounded into shape for the next home game. The heavy weights of Mars Hill College were defeated to the tune of 20-6. The next game played at Lincoln Memorial University was one such as few southern teams has ever experienced. The gridiron was not lined off with white lines on a dark background, but with mud lines on a white surface of soft, velvety, damp, cool linoleum which was three inches thick at the beginning of the game and increased throughout the hour of battle. The linoleum soon became dilapidated and the gridiron was a slush of mud and ice water. The "Mountaineers" took this game 19-0.

In the next game the Teachers sought revenge and got it. This game was played at home with Tennessee Wesleyan College. When the final whistle sounded the score was 19-0 in favor of the Teachers. This is the first time since athletic relations were established between the two schools that the Teachers have been able to get away with the long end of the score. The last game away from home was with Lenoir-Rhyne College at Hickory, North Carolina. The work of the giant Sperlock at quarter, who carried the ball over Harvard's goal line when they were defeated by Centre College in 1921 defeated the Teachers in this game.

The final game of the season with Tusculum College was one which everybody looked forward to with interest. This was the game that was to decide the success or failure of the Teachers for the football season. This game played on the Saturday following Thanksgiving drew the largest crowd of the year. Tusculum's entire student body was on hand to witness the game and support their team. In the first four minutes of play Tusculum registered seven points and the game began to look favorable for them. But in a few minutes the score was tied by a pass from Boswell to Biggs. In a few more minutes the Teachers succeeded in adding seven more points to their score making the count 14-7. Now the battle was on for sure. Several times the visitors threatened to score but each time they were held for downs by the "fighting" Teachers. It was in the last few minutes of play that Tusculum opened up their aerial attack which the Teachers were unable to break up. Another touchdown by Tusculum gave them a chance to tie the score. Spectators stood breathless while the visitors attempted to kick. But the kick went wild and so did the entire faculty and student body of the Teachers College. Tusculum was defeated by the narrow margin of one point, the score being 14-13. In the evening an elaborate banquet was given by the faculty in the college dining hall in honor of the football men. About two hundred students and alumni of the school attended.

Tete Boswell was unanimously elected captain by the letter men to guide the destinies of the Teachers in 1926. Clifton Humphries was chosen first alternate captain with Clark second alternate. Aside from Wallace and Sharp who will graduate this year all the letter men will be back next year. With this experienced material as a nucleus, Coach Robinson expects to build up a team capable of competing with the strong teams which he has on his schedule for 1926.

Boys' Basketball

When Coach Robinson made the call for basketball players in December, only about twenty responded, and this number diminished day by day, for it was a test of "a survival of the fittest." We played only the strongest colleges of Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia, and West Virginia. Although a large percentage of games were lost, we feel that, by winning from some of the strongest teams, such as Lenoir-Rhyne, Tusculum, and some other good teams, and by running a close race with the other colleges of such reputation, that our season was a great success.

With Mooney and Thornburg, letter men of last year, Coach soon located C. Humphries of King College; Sharp, an old Normal man; J. Humphreys; Simmons; Odell, of Johnson City. Much credit is due the reserves.

A banquet was given by the faculty in honor of both teams in the College Cafeteria at which letters were awarded for the year. Captain Mooney was re-elected captain and Jess Humphreys was chosen alternate captain for '27.

Girls' Basketball

"Many were called, but few were chosen"—and we might add that the few were well chosen. About twenty-eight girls responded to the invitation to go out for basketball this year. Everybody practiced hard and were delighted with the choice of the first team. Our team, while not so lucky this season, fought hard and proved themselves good sports by receiving graciously, defeat and victory alike. Each girl fought for her team and for the school with as much enthusiasm as any championship team might have done.

The student body and faculty deserve highest praise for the splendid backing that they gave the team at all times, and it was their sportsmanship and loyalty that helped to keep the fight in the team in the face of defeat.

Enough cannot be said about the "scrubs." The successes that were ours could never have been accomplished had it not been for their faithfulness, for a team "isn't any better than its substitutes." The second team was composed of Misses Taylor, Zeigler, Hays, Ross, Kendall, Morrison, and Cook.

To Miss Krepps should go the greatest honor, for it was her hard work, sympathetic kindness, and excellent coaching, both as to team and individual, that made our team. We are expecting her to put out the champions of the South in the near future; and here's to her success and to that of the future teams of E. T. S. T. C.

With six letter men: Mooney, Phillippi and Gamble of last year's squad and Alexander, Garner and Sharp of former years to start with, Coach Robinson faced the problem met with in football and basketball—that of developing a team out of practically new material. The game with King College which was played previous to the time this goes to press gave Coach a chance to see the weak points in his team and to try out some new material. Prospects now pointed toward the strongest team that has ever been put out by the school.

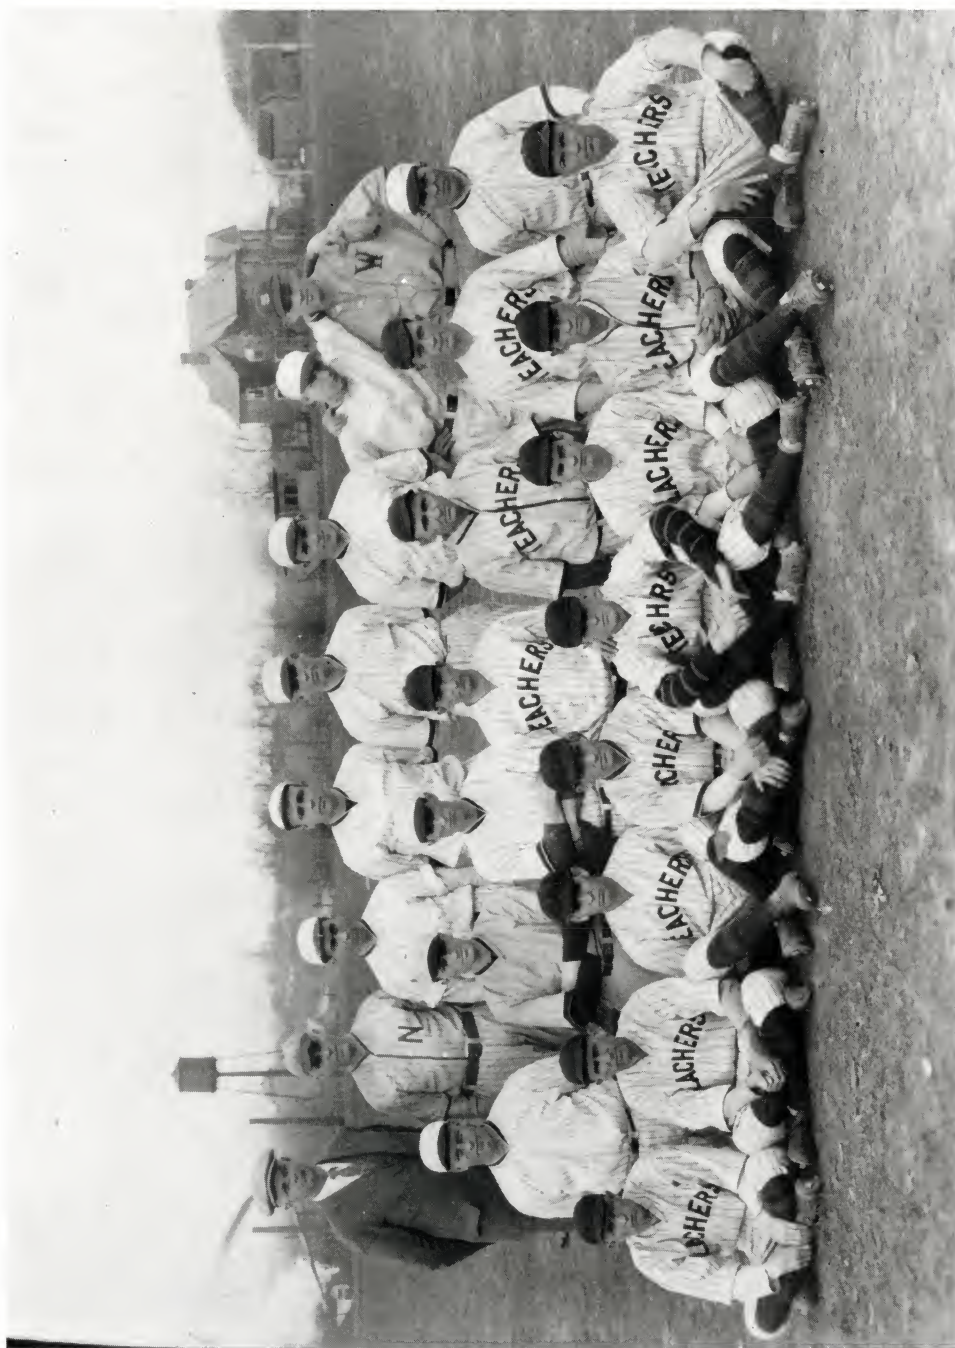

After two weeks practice, the letter men met and elected Garner captain and Alexander alternate captain. Emory Sharp has been selected as manager by the Student Activities Council.

Although it is not as yet certain who will make the team the following are bidding fair to a berth on the first string: Grubb, Sharp, C. Humphries, Bralley, Garner, Mooney, Alexander, Phillippi, Crouch, McBee, Kennedy, Gamble, Davis, O'Dell, Weatherby, Bolinger, Acuff.

The Men's "T" Club is founded upon four principles as follows:

- 1—Promotion of college spirit in the student body with a larger participation in inter-collegiate sports.
- 2—To foster loyalty to every activity of the Teachers College.
- 3—To promote clean sportsmanship.
- 4—To discourage the wearing of all other letters on the campus.

The Girls' "T" Club was organized April 3, 1926. Orena Gray was elected president with Una Killian secretary and treasurer. The Girls' Varsity Club is the first of its kind in the history of the school. Although the club is new, it will be, in the years to come, one of the leading organizations of the school, being built up year by year by those winning the varsity "T." The aims of the club are to create enthusiasm and to promote clean sportsmanship among the girls of the school. The aim of each individual member is to always be a sport.

Jokes

The absent-minded professor had been invited out for luncheon. As usual he was making his share of social blunders. Finally when they were seated next to the table his wife nudged him and said:

"Frank, where are your manners?"

"Why—er—they must be in the wash. I'm sure I changed them this morning."

"Why does President Sherrod seem so partial to Dr. Porter?"

"Because he is the only person in school who isn't taking a correspondence course to become president."

Professor Preston:—"What can you tell me about nitrates?"

Helen Pierce—"Well—er—they're a lot cheaper than day rates."

Miss Young gave notice to the president that she was going to get married. President Sherrod slightly perturbed said:

"Of course I don't want to put any obstacles in your way, but I wish it were possible for you to postpone it until I can get another secretary."

Miss Young:—"But I can't. I haven't known him long enough to ask him to put it off."

Mooney:—"You've got a bad cold."

Sharp:—"Yep."

Mooney:—"How'd you get it?"

Sharp:—"Slept in a field last night and someone left the gate open."

"Have you got a Charles Dickens in your home?" asked the polite agent.

Bill Mathes:—"No."

"Or a Robert Burns?"

Bill:—"No."

"Or a Gene Field?"

Bill:—"No, we don't and what is more we don't run a boarding house. You might try the house across the street."

Bonnie Shell:—"Please, conductor will you help me off this train?"

Conductor:—"Certainly, Miss."

Bonnie:—"You see it's this way: being rather stout I have to get out backwards—the porters think I'm getting in so they give me a shove and say, 'Hurry up Miss, I'm five stations past where I want to go'."

Jokes

Prof. Rowell:—"No, my father wasn't exactly a policeman, but he went with them a great deal."

HOW WE LIKE JONESBORO

St. Peter (to applicant)—"Where are you from?"

Mr. Morrison:—"Jonesboro."

St. Peter:—"Come on in, but I don't think you'll like it."

HOSPITALITY

Coach Robinson (attending revival)—"Put your money back in your pocket Phillippi, this is on me."

Wallace:—"My razor won't cut at all."

Anne:—"Why Wallace, you don't mean to say your beard is tougher than the oil cloth I cut with it this morning, do you?"

"Sorry to wake you", said Jess Humphreys to Professor Field, "but there is a window open in your house."

"Which one?" inquired Mr. Field.

"The one you're looking out of. Good night."

Dean Burleson:—"What's become of your hired man?"

Coach Robby:—"He used to be a chauffeur and he laid down under a mule yesterday to see why he wouldn't go."

RETALIATIONS

Mr. Berry:—"My wife got me a box of cigars for a Christmas present, but I'll get even with her yet."

Garner:—"What will you do?"

Berry:—"I'll select her next hat."

FIDO'S POWERFUL KICK

During Students' Day, Alexander and Phillippi were doing some plumbing for Professor Bible.

"Have you any alcohol", asked Frank, "to clean these pipes with?"

Mrs. Bible:—"No, but we have some old whiskey."

"Just the thing", remarked Phillippi, winking at Alexander.

A while later, Mrs. Bible returned with this question, "Did the whiskey do the work?"

"Splendid, full of kick", replied Phillippi.

Mrs. Bible:—"I'm so glad. We did not need it any longer. Mr. Bible had just washed his bird dog in it."

Hettie:—"Has Kate changed much?"

Sarah:—"She thinks so."

Hettie:—"How so?"

Sarah:—"She's always talking about what a fool she used to be."

Mr. McLin:—"Are you sure it was a marriage license you gave me a year ago?"

Clerk:—"Certainly, sir. Why?"

Mr. McLin:—"Because, I've been leading a dog's life ever since."

Mr. McFee:—"The idea of letting your wife go around and tell people that she made a man of you. You never hear my wife talking like that."

Mr. Carson:—"No, but I heard her tell my wife that she had done her best."

Only one man, when in love, ever told the truth. That was Adam when he said, "Eve, you are the only woman in the world for me."
